COLLEGE GIVES MANY DIPLOMAS

Large Senior Class Awarded Diplomas. Honorary Degrees Conferred. Other Activities of the Week. Honors and Prizes.

Commencement week at Gettysburg College opened on Sunday morning with the baccalaureate sermon by President Granville in College Church. The large Senior class, numbering eighty-five occupied the center of the church which was filled with relatives and friends of the graduates. The special music was an anthem, a solo with solo Mr. Lutz and a solo by Miss Ruth Clutz and Mr. Lutz playing a violin obligato.

President Granville based his address on the Parable of the Talents, his subject being "The Responsibility which Educated Impose." He said in part:

"The right sort of a college graduate should not be far removed from the 40th and flow of the every day human stream life of the home town or of the community in which the college is located. If his education has been of the right kind he will have entered more deeply than ever before into the political, social, industrial and moral situations that confront us as a people, and will have carefully studied the perplexing problems that are calling to us as a nation for solution for both its future success his usefulness in the most comprehensive sense of the term will in a very large measure depend on the keenness of his perception in discovering our real, not essential needs, and on his skill and industry in meeting them.

"We observe that the Master did not bend over the talents in the simple to his servants to do work according to their own surest will; the talents were given to them in trust, for we read that after a long time the Lord of the servants returneth and reckoneth with them." And this idea of the responsibility of stewardship is brought out in a clear and strong light when he pronounced with two unpardonable severity, the Master said 'at my coming I should have received mine own with interest.' Your talent of a college education has been given you as a sacred trust, it is a temporary, a conditional loan it is a personal obligation which you cannot evade or shift to other shoulders. It is a responsibility for which you individually will be held to the highest accountability.

"If we do not bring to our bank interest on the money we have borrowed as well as the principal when demanded, the bank has no redress in case we are insolvent; it is too late then to be prepared to bear, for that is one of the hazards at the business of banking. But God is never at a loss to secure His demands and His decrees are executed by a power infinite to any human tribunal His judgments are final, there can be no appeal from His decisions to a higher court, for His court is the Supreme Court of the universe. He is a judge who cannot be influenced by a referendum or intimidated by a riot. In the moral measure as God is love and delights in rewarding so God is the true the loyal, the faithful and, so also His justice is without flaw and His punishment is just as sure to follow faithlessness as His mercy abounds to those who love Him and keep His commandments.

"And all this you must weigh carefully and ponder in personal prayer on once whose living constitute on the one hand or by an indirect nature or on affected mankind on the other, having always in view only the highest utility and the largest good, with a burning desire to accelerate all movements in the realm of civil righteousness human happiness and holiness, and holy nearness. Never have the courage to ask where your duty lies and you should be ready and willing to serve against whomever the occasion may lead."

In the evening at six o'clock an open air service was held on the College Campus. Dr. T. J. Barkley, read the Scripture lesson; Rev. L. Dow Ott offered prayer; and Hon. F. E. Taylor made a brief address. The music was led by the college orchestra.

Later in the evening the annual address to the Young Men's Christian Association was made by Robert Waidendall, of New York, a graduate of the college in the class of 1900 and whose fifth generation family inherited the Y. M. C. A. work. The college glee club formed the choir at the evening service.

Class Day exercises were held on Tuesday afternoon on the college campus and were largely attended, the usual numerous events were on the program. After the class the presentation of the Senior walk and lamp was made, during which the secretary took place. The presentation speech was made by Dr. Hauer and President Granville received the substantial gift.

Tuesday evening President and Mrs. Granville gave their annual reception to alumni and friends of the college at the White House.

Tuesday evening the classes of 1892, 1907 and 1910 and the Phi Delta Theta fraternity held their banquets in the College Hall. The same evening the classes of 1902, 1908 and 1909 and the Phi Kappa Alpha fraternity held banquets at Hotel Gettysburg. The class of 1902 held their banquet at the same place Monday evening. Tuesday evening the Phi Gamma Delta and Sigma Chi held banquets at their lodges on the campus and the Drahla celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their founding at their home on North Washington street.

The eightieth commencement of Gettysburg College was held Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. The Seniors received their diplomas follow the following address by Hon. Henry M. The alumni collation followed, several hundred being served by the ladies of the collation which has been held this is charge for some years.

SERIOUS FIRE IS AVERTED

Sleeping Family Discover that their Property is in Flames Awakened by Neighbors who See Blaze. House Saved.

Shortly after ten o'clock Tuesday evening the residence of the tenant house of William A. Bigham, adjoining the pumping station of the Gettysburg Water Company was destroyed by fire. The early discovery of the blaze and prompt work alone prevented a more serious fire.

The tenant house is occupied by Alonzo Vingling and family all of whom had retired and were asleep when the fire occurred. It was discovered by the family of Mr. Bigham who saw the blaze shortly after it had gotten a fair start. They hurried to the house arousing the family and got to work The Kitchen was doomed before any water could be gotten on it and as the building was but a few feet from the house an effort was made directed to save that structure. Sparks in large numbers fell on the house roof and the prompt work of the family bucket brigade alone saved further damage.

An overheated kitchen stove is thought to have been the origin of the fire.

The reduction of the blaze was plainly visible in Gettysburg and many people here judged that the fire was either in Biglerville or Arendtsville.

LIVELSBERGER—SMITH

Miss Florence L. Smith, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Gregory F Smith, of Biglerville, was married to Mr. Ralph Metzger, son of John S Livelsberger, of Biglerville, at seven o'clock Tuesday evening at the nuptial mass Tuesday morning at 7.30 o'clock by Rev J. A. Huber, in the St. Aloysius church, Biglerville.

Miss Elsie Smith, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Clarence Lawrence, cousin of the groom, was the best man.

The bride was attired in silk mercerized over nunsvaline and carried a bouquet of white carnations.

The bridesmaid was also attired in white mercerized over nunsvaline and carried white carnations.

After the ceremony the couple were seated at a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents. Numerous congratulations were showered and plants of the season, in large quantity.

Mr and Mrs. Livelsberger left on a brief trip and on their return will reside at the home of the bride's parents

CHICKEN SAVED BY FIRE

The eldest son of Charles Shriver, of Blue Ridge Summit, who, several months ago, had one of his hands blown off by dynamite, has had another narrow escape from death as a result of which he is now in comfortable shape.

The boy was picking strawberries near his home at the Summit, and while now a couple of horses in the pasture field, which adjoins the berry patch.

He was thrown to the land and by quick observation was able to get his mother to commence the effort of saving him. Several chickens, which she killed and applied to the wound

The blood from the snake that had been injected in the boy's hand was so strong that the cure was most prompt.

PRETTY WEDDING IN ST. JAMES

Miss Flo Blocher Becomes Bride of Rev. Joseph Arnold. Both will Go as Missionaries to Africa. Pretty Wedding.

A wedding of exceptional beauty was solemnized at St. James church on Thursday when Miss S. Flo Blocher, of Strasburg Ridge, became the bride of the Rev. Joseph Arnold, of Brooklyn, New York. A color scheme of gold and white carried out in appointments and flowers made an extremely pretty scene. Preceding the wedding Mrs. Joseph B. Mr. Mackley is principal of the Longfellow school in that city. He is a former resident of near New Oxford. He is a well known to the lower end of Adams county.

SCOUT MASTER WILL REMAIN

The Boy Scouts of Gettysburg were made very glad recently by the announcement that their Scout Master, Charles Plaugle, one a teacher at college, would remain with them during the summer of 1912, having first refused a boys' directorship in a large Y. M. C. A. in order that his work with the Gettysburg boys might be continued. During the coming Summer months he will take in new Scouts, give instruction for the second and first class degrees.

FIREMEN WANT NEW APPARATUS

Automobile Fire Engine Believed by Many to be Necessary for Proper Protection of Property. To Call Town Meeting.

Early action looking toward the purchase of additional fire fighting equipment—possibly an automobile fire engine—was planned at a meeting of the local company on Wednesday evening. A town meeting is to be called in the very near future to discuss the question and it is expected that a committee, appointed by the firemen, will receive active co-operation on the part of the citizens and the town council.

"General Needle" has been in service for many years and there has been intervened for a long time that the old engine might go to pieces if some evilized moment leaving the town practically helpless before it by of any consequences. Various suggestions have been made from time to time which would be of material benefit to the situation, the purchase of a chemical engine being one of these plans.

But the fire company feels that something more efficient and more powerful must be purchased. Gettysburg has been very healthy. With an increase in population has come a corresponding increase of the hazards in portion of the town and a much wider territory to be covered whenever a fire occurs. Then when the present Biltzky engine was purchased. With this extension of territory to be covered by the fire apparatus quickly to the scene of action is a matter with the greatest importance, mowing engine, truck and reels properly housed and ready for service at all times. The problem of an automobile fire engine has been solved in many cities—would do away with the delay in getting horses to the engine house and arrival, for the modern apparatus is ready for immediate work. At these times when the fire is discovered turning out at the town meeting in the near future the fire chief will be instructed to appointed wednesday evening. G. A. Deatrick, H. C. Slagle, and Charles Stewart: William Fleming and F. E. Wheeler.

The action of the town council in authorizing the purchase of 500 feet of hose and in giving the company the mere contributions of $50 00 from Adams Collection and $5 00 from Mrs. Jesse Johns following work at the fire on the corner of Washington street. The company gaves a vioting vote of thanks for the donations

Shue Hinge and Alvin Pfaff were elected members of the company and Charles D. Wilson was chosen to represent Gettysburg at the state convention of firemen at Scranton.

EAGLE MEASURES SEVEN FEET FROM TIP TO TIP

Of the fields the other afternoon, Roy Martin, a lad living on the farm east of Newburg, discovered what he thought to be the biggest bird he even saw. Later it came nearer him, and he noticed that it was not a bird or hazard, but resembled the pictures of eagles he saw in books.

With considerable pride, he brought the big bird to the ground, and after taking it home and measuring it found that it was seven feet, five inches from tip to tip of the wings. He sold the eagle to a taxidermist

TOLL ROADS DOOMED

State Highway Commissioner E. M. Bigelow has announced that he will inaugurate the first of the proceedings to condemn toll roads which will be included in main highway routes but which charge tolls for maintenance. The first action will be brought in Lancaster county between Lancaster and Strasburg and the Bedford county line, which crosses portions of Franklin and Fulton counties.

MADE GOOD IN THE WEST

Blanton Duncan. Ornsit Clerk of the Courts and Recorder of Platte County, Illinois, is in this section visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. Duncan is a son of Samuel M. Duncan, formerly of Abbottstown, and is making good in the West. He left here before going West about 30 years ago.

Mr. Duncan's term as Circuit Clerk and Recorder will expire this year. He has announced that he would for a second term of four years.

FIRST WORK FOR THE ENCAMPMENT

Preparing for Water Supply for National Guard Encampment here Next Month. Busy Digging Well. Other Preparations.

The site for this year's National Guard encampment is already the scene of considerable activity in preparation for the big ten day event, July 30 to 41.

Lower Berkbees, of Table Rock, are engaged in drilling a well which will go down two hundred and fifty feet. If this much with success another well may be sunk at another part of the grounds and the town water may be used only for washing the well water being used for drinking and cooking purposes.

Plans for the town water have been placed from the mains near the property of Wm. Hunter on Scotland Ridge to the site of the old McClean buildings and more pipe will be laid out during the next ten days.

The majority of the fields which will be used by the three regiments this summer are in good and well cared for condition little preparation and mowing of trimming up brush and getting things generally presentable will have to be removed where they would interfere with the manoeuvres of troops and considerable other work of this character will be necessary. It is proposed to do this within the next two weeks and the quartermaster's department will likely have everything about the camp site in fine shape before the end of June. The erection of buildings and so on can then go along without interruption.

81 IN ADAMS COUNTY

Deputy State Factory Inspector Joseph F. Quinn in Harrisburg the chief factory inspector's report for 1911 which shows that Adams county has 81 industrial establishments, employing 1729 employes, of whom 1,001 are males and 784 females. The industries in Adams county are: Iron 8; leather 3; lumber 5; machine shops 4; miscellaneous industries 48; textile 7; tobacco 6.

York and Adams comprise the twenty fourth district. That the Quinn was "on the job" was shown by the fact that he dismissed six minors from industrial establishments because they did not have the proper age certificates. He also gave 14 orders to owners of industrial establishments to install guards around dangerous machinery for the better protection of employes. He also issued three orders for elevator guards. Mr. Quinn was also alert in enforcing the law regarding the cleanliness of the sanitary conditions. The report shows that during 1911 he compelled 20 owners of buildings to put up fire escapes for the protection of human life.

ARRESTED ON BIGAMY CHARGE

D. Rolla Finkenbinder, Married in Gettysburg in February Last Arrested here on Saturday. Thought he was Divorced.

Charged with bigamy D. Rolla Finkenbinder was arrested here Saturday afternoon at 4:45 o'clock by Officer Bair on a capias issued by Chief Shealer who had been following him for several days through Maryland, Virginia, Hagerstown and Chambersburg. Mr Shealer finally learned that he was headed for this place and returned from his hunt Saturday morning and had the capias issued. He took no soon as the train arrived Finkenbinder claimed that the officer had the wrong man but offered no resistance

On February 9 last, Rev. F. X. Dougherty married in St. Francis Xavier church D. Rolla Finkenbinder and Miss Jennie Thomas at Gettysburg note 1. The records at the Court house indicate that in securing the marriage license the groom gave residence as Penn twp. He had been previously married and by bigamy he now stands charged with the crime. If convicted, it is said on January 15, 1912, the bride being Miss Eva Mae Kaylor and the bride-to-be at that time practicing not only as to a resident of Harrisburg.

Finkenbinder claims as his defense that he thought a divorce, for which he had been suing in Franklin County court, had been granted and that he was legally separated from his first wife at the time he married Miss Thomas. He brought the action on grounds of desertion and says he had been informed by his attorney that a decree would be granted on a date prior to that on which he married Miss Thomas. He took it for granted that the had been done and his second marriage followed. All the proceedings had been taken to the divorce case. It is said, not by any means officially yet, that when Mr. Finkenbinder, who had been separated at any rate for hearings, made a request to offer testimony and this held up the granting of the decree the court refused to hear the testimony, free to marry again. He claims he knew nothing of the delay until after his second marriage.

Nothing was known here of the case until last week when a letter was received from the first Mrs. Finkenbinder telling of the second marriage. It was given into the hands of the local police with speedy action following.

Finkenbinder is now in the county jail.

BUILDINGS STRUCK

During the thunder storm Thursday morning the barn on the Howard Heiser farm near Oak Grove school house, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. All the live stock was saved and some of the machinery but the balance of the contents was burned. Lightning struck and tore struck the barn of Amos Dutterer, on the farm adjoining Mr. Heiser, but no serious damage was done.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR BOSTON NATIONALS

Cy Young, the Dean of Major League Pitchers.

The weakness of the Boston Nationals in League clubs for years was in the pitcher's box, for the South End outfit had enough hard hitting and second season runs to assure itself a much better position in the championship race than that in which it finally landed. No great change has been made in the pitching staff this year, but Manager Kling has three or four really good men, and the new owners are only waiting to see what is really needed before counting their purse strings and going out to get it.

With "Cy" Young promising to regain some of his former strength this season, and with Tyler, McTigue, Perdue, Masters and newcomers named Dennelly and Brady, all promising to do well he is fairly good shape regarding hotmen Behind the hat Kling will have Bardick, whose arm is no good, and Gowdy, who came to the team late last season, and whose batting stopping has been one of the features of his team's work in the south.

Except for various pitchers and catchers, Manager Kling started the season with only two regular players who began the campaign with Fred Tenney a year ago These are Rowe, first baseman and Moran, left fielder. All of the other seven players came to the club in 1911, and the purchases and trades that were made generally were for the better.

MACK'S INFIELD COST $10.85

Clever Manager Secured Shortstop Barry, Eddie Collins and Frank Baker for Price.

Did any one ever tell what Connie Mack paid for that magnificent infield of his? Well, it certainly can be done and so much toward winning the world's championship for that which? Of course not? Well, it actually cost the clever manager of the Philadelphia team just $10.85. This is surprising, particularly when it is remembered that such a fabulous sum as $22,000 was paid for Cronin by Pittsburg and the Giants willingly gave $11,000 for Marquard.

Connie is recognized as one of the shrewdest traders in the whole baseball world. He has had his eye on Eddie Collins, the pitcher of other days, is to be a valuable man for Wilson this season, and Manager Kling will have to look elsewhere for a pitcher.

Connie Mack is all smiles.

George Mullin says he has not his heart on this being his best year. To make it that he will have to go some, all will admit.

Manager Wagner captain of the Pirates because he understands my system and has had the necessary experience," says Fred Clarke.

The White Sox have sent Roland Barrows to Jersey City. He was out under option to the Lowell club of the New England league last year.

President Murphy thinks the local Springs at the Eastman Hotel, Hot Spring, Ark., will keep his players in training, and plans to rent a whole private base ball spring, and says specially prepared food for his Pirates.

Hoe was in New York. Barry was at Holy Cross and Baker was footing around in Reading, Pa.

Mack captured this trio of baseball stars for the price of their railroad fares, and the three tickets totaled exactly $10.85. He had Davis for first when he made the deal It was a fact that will never be duplicated

STORIES OF THE DIAMOND

Games in Cincinnati will begin at 2 o'clock this season.

The Dodgers have sent infielder Jimmy Breen back to Milwaukee.

St. Joseph has turned Second Baseman Lowhorn back to Washington

Baltimore has released Pitchers Dave Roth to Troy, and Catcher Fingel to York.

Aylie Latham would accept a position as umpire in some good league. He says so himself.

Manager Joby of the Hatens team released Murray, Aoele and Coleman, all pitchers, recently.

Detroit is trying to sign John J. McGraw's son Horace has now formerly caught for Cornell university.

Claude Elliott, the pitcher of other days, is to be a valuable man for Wilson this season, and Manager Kling will have to look elsewhere for a pitcher.

Connie Mack is all smiles.

George Mullin says he has not his heart on this being his best year. To make it that he will have to go some, all will admit.

JULY 4TH PRECAUTION

To meet the dangers of July fourth, large supplies of tetanus antitoxin have been ordered for the state serum distributing stations throughout the Commonwealth, by Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, Commissioner of Health.

Despite the nation wide movement for "A Safe and Sane Fourth," which has been steadily growing these last few years, the total number of accidents reported, from the deadliest tetanus or lock jaw, is greater on that day than any other in the three hundred and sixty-five.

The serum sent by the Department of Health of distribution to be just as used to immunize the victims of crasher, gun shot and other wounds. When it is used immediately following the accident or within twenty-four or even thirty-six hours thereafter, the danger of infection is reduced to a minimum.

CHILDREN PRESENT RED RIDING HOOD

Catholic School Pupils Present Old Story in Shape of Operetta, Two Graduates Receive Diplomas. The Program.

Before an audience which filled Xavier hall to overflowing the pupils of the Catholic school were held on Thursday evening and diplomas were awarded to two graduates. The hall was very prettily decorated with the national colors, red, white and gold, and the Citizens' Band furnished music.

The principal feature of the program was the operetta "Red Riding Hood." The old story was told in a new way with the addition of fairies and pixie songs. Five scenes were used to tell the whole of the story from the start of Little Red Riding Hood for her mother's home until her safe return after her encounter with the wolf.

The first scene opened with a revel of the fairies a number of pixie girls, prettily dressed and carrying wands, making an amusing fairy band, provided over by Marie Gulbran, queen. In the second scene the mother, Dorothy Hoke, is seen giving the basket of food to her daughter. The third scene was in the forest where the wolf, disguised, takes the part of the wolf and in the fourth scene the effort of the wolf to devour the little girl was successfully prevented by the family or friend of the latter. The last scene return to the realm of the pretty operetta with a "Welcome" chorus by a number of boys and girls. A unique letter dance by Mary Gulbran, as the queen "Greeting to Spring," to the tune of "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn, completed the first part of the program. "Topsy Turvy Land" by Miss Hoke's class of juvenile charges preceded the valedictory by Marie Helen Stock.

The address to the graduates of Philadelphia, who emphasized the importance of the training given in the schools, saying that the mission of the world was to teach the heart as well as the mind.

DREW KNIFE ON COUNTY WOMAN

Mrs. William Tapper Has Unpleasant Experience with Intruder at her Hams Haar Town. Finally Driven away.

Mrs. William Tapper, who lives a short distance east of town on the George F. Spangler farm, was suddenly confronted in her home Thursday evening by John Stolsnor, mentally deficient, who drew an open knife. Stolsnar had stolen quietly into the house and approached the woman who was working at the kitchen sink. Feeling that some one was in the room she turned around to find him at her side.

"Are you more afraid?" demanded the man.

"They are outside the house," answered the frightened woman making a dash for the door as Stolsnor drew his knife.

Stolsnar followed her as she ran out and the house was secured by the front door bolting it because he thinks any thought to leave the place. He locked the back door also just as Stolsnar returned to it when he found he could not gain entrance by that route. The man again returned to the front door and from there while he was there Mrs. Tapper quickly called her children in and ran out of the house leaving the rear door locked in his face as she fled to the home of Mr. Spangler.

While Mrs. Tapper was running to the fields to call Mr. Tapper she was overtaken by Stolsnor who began to use his clubbing fists. He battered to the house to find Mrs. Tapper gone from there to the other. Mrs. Tapper ordered him to leave but he refused and it was not until he was threatened with a club that the half-witted man finally started away. He was followed a short distance until all were sure he was well out of the vicinity of the Tapper home.

The officers in Gettysburg were notified of the disturbance and they put a sharp look-out for the man all evening.

The last seen of him was about half past nine when he sorted out the Arendtsville road. The officers were quickly put on the trail but is the darkness he got away.

Miss Sadie A. Smith third daughter of Mr and Mrs. J. B. A. Smith, of New Oxford, left Saturday for parts unknown by her parents. The girl, who is 19 years old, was an employe of the Livingston shoe factory and Saturday forenoon was at her place of duty. At 11:15 o'clock she left the factory, supposedly to go to dinner, but she failed to return to her home. Some parties, however, saw her going out the Hanover road and during the afternoon was noticed on the streets of Hanover, but since that time she has been seen or heard of her by her parents. After she had disappeared her parents received a letter from the girl but denied several of her best shirts, which she had, not purchased a new hat before leaving town.

The wound is not serious. Penn claims using a knife in self defense as Repp's clothing was weighty against the truth or his denial. Penn was captured an hour and a half after the fight near his home on West High street by Officer Eaton-on and Deputy Sheriff Brubaker-and was arraigning gave bail in his appearance at a later hour.

The affair started out of a simple argument about Penn talking on top which room or the pavement though it is said that the colored youth has had a grudge against Repp for some time. Repp was sitting on the railing at the corner of the hotel when Penn passed and brooked against him.

"You seem to need a lot of room," Repp remarked.

Penn made a retort and there were questions exchanged as to whether either "needed anything" from the other. The conversation was loud and further down North Washington street and when Penn trumped on Repp's foot the latter struck the latter with his hoe. Penn lett and returned shortly after. It is said cutting Repp following one the abdomen and the weapon whichever it was—cutting a slight wound in the flesh.

A warrant was secured quickly and a search started, but less than a hundred and fifty joining in the hunt which occurred about Penn's home. He finally came in West High street from the direction of the fireman and was taken without difficulty by the two officers. He remained in jail over night and secured bail Tues. morning.

STAUFFER—HAMILTON.

A pretty home wedding took place in Gettysburg at one o'clock Tuesday afternoon when Miss Caroline Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton, of North Washington street, was wed to Edward A. Stauffer, of Chambersburg. The ceremony was read by the Rev. S. A. Dobbs, of Hanover, at the home of the bride, at the Rev. F. E. Taylor, of Gettysburg. Only the two families and a few near friends were present.

The house was prettily decorated with daisies, honeysuckle and roses. Mrs. H. B. Zinn sang before the ceremony LaForge's "Wedding Song" and Miss Beulah Armor played the wedding march from Lohengrin.

The bride wore a gown of cream satin trimmed with princess lace and carried a shower of carnations and roses. Miss Mary Power, Miss Ruth Hamilton and Miss Ruth Stauffer, sister of York, were the bridesmaids. Elmer Stauffer, of York, a brother of the groom, was best man. The ring service was used.

The newly wedded couple left on the four o'clock train over the Reading for a trip of several weeks after which they will be at home in Chambersburg where Mrs. Mr. Stauffer is pastor of the Second Lutheran church. He is a graduate of both college and seminary here and has a large number of friends in town.

The bride is a graduate of Irving College, Mechanicsburg, and a very fine accomplished musician under whom a large young people of Gettysburg have been studied. She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton.

$90,000 HAS BEEN RAISED

Semi Annual Meeting of College Board of Trustees Hears of Success in Securing Additional Endowment. Other Business.

At the semi-annual meeting of the board of trustees of Gettysburg College on Tuesday President Granville reported that $90,000 had been secured to be secured, before the Rockefeller gift of $50,000 would be available, half of which has been secured by which he elated to applied a large committee, made up of members of the board and alumni to assist in carrying on the campaign during the coming year.

Prof Charles H. Huber will relinquish his teaching duties at Prep this year in order to assist President Granville in this work and an auto instructor has been secured for that position to carry on the work of which Prof. Huber will be responsible.

Hawed Rogers Musselman has resigned and two new instructors were elected, Raymond H. Bell to teach Latin and Joseph H. Pritchey to teach mathematics. Both are members of this year's graduating class.

W. L. Glatfelter, of Spring Grove, who has been a member of the board of trustees for the past four years was elected to succeed the late Benjamin Graff who died within the past ten days.

Rev. H. A. Rinard, who has been Y. M. C. A. secretary and registrar at the college, resigned to enter upon that work and Prof. Stover was given the position of registrar in addition to his work as assistant in chemistry. Harold Bowman, a senior in the Seminary, will have the position of student Y. M. C. A. secretary.

Rev. Charles E. Schaeffer was advanced from instructor to acting professor of Romance languages.

Dr. J. A. Clutz was re-appointed a member of the executive committee. His term has expired.

At the afternoon session resolutions in memory of Mr. Graff were presented and adopted.

BOY AND GIRL IN HOSPITAL

Although policemen and searching parties from Waynesboro and this city have been scouring the Blue Ridge mountains in search of a child missing in the wheatsheats of a boy and girl who disappeared at the park Thursday, the search has been fruitless.

Clifford Frantzman, aged 17 years, who went to the mountains about two months ago from Thurmont and Mary Ann Shoop, aged nine, of the same place, are now hidden in the Blue Ridge Mountains, between Pen Mar and Waynesboro.

The Weller girl went to Waynesburn to visit her sister and never returned a second time. She had been living with her grandmother in Thurmont. They were accompanied by a boy playedtogether to the Maryland town, and after they left the boy reported they went to Pen Mar and were last seen Thursday. A search for the two resulted in the locksmith of James Purdy.

MUSICAL CLUBS' CONCERT

Before a large audience the Gettysburg College musical clubs gave their annual commencement concert in Brua chapel on Monday evening. The orchestra was at its best and delighted the audience with a number of selections. The instrumentalists solos by Miller and Mr. Lotz were worthy of special mention. The glee club and the mandolin club were also on the program. Prof. Hoffmeier was director for the evening. The clubs elected J. Calvin Harriman manager for next year and Prof. Mr. Harriman as leader. Wolfe club and J. Dale Diehl leader of the glee club.

MANY GUESTS AT ANNUAL DANCE

Pan Hellenic Dance, Big Function at College Year, Given Friday Evening in Gladfelter Hall with Large Number of Guests Present.

The annual Pan Hellenic dance at college was given Friday evening in Gladfelter Hall with more than one hundred present. The room in which the affair was given has recently been frescoed and an attractive color scheme prevailed. Nothing in the way of decorations was used, as no effort was made to provide special decorations as an unusually large dance in the past

A program of twenty eight dances was played by the college orchestra which has proved itself a more popular musical organization than any secured from out of town. Attractive programs of leather made for the use and cases were provided. Mrs Miller in charge.

Among the guests were, Mrs. E. H. Sieceli, Oakland, Md.; Mrs. G. S. Bikle, Frederick, Md.; Mrs. Cunningham, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Pascall Middletown; Mrs. High; Mrs. Wentz, Middletown; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd VanDoren, Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Donald P. Mowbray, Philadelphia; Mrs. Elizabeth Beeth, Mrs. Charles S. Dincen, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hall, Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Martin Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hall, Mrs. Mrs. Mrs. Granville, Mrs. E. H. LITTLESTOWN TEACHERS

At the meeting of the Littlestown school board last week the following were elected for the year 1913-14: Principal, Miss Clara A. Fisher; Assistant Principal, Miss Lydia B. Bowman; Grammar School, Claude Lambert; Intermediate, Miss Nora Stoemiker; Secondary Miss Mary Hann; Primary, Miss Alice Mehring. Neither Fred Cronkleton, the principal, nor Miss Ruth Mehring, successfully taught the primary school last year were applicants for re-election. Miss Mehring resigned as primary teacher, which she had previously taught for many years. Miss Fisher is a graduate of Frostburg Academy. Bowman graduated from Millersville Keller Business College of Lewisburg, and Lebanon, Univ. He was principal of the Littlestown High. Miss Hann is a graduate of Shippensburg State Normal and has just completed her third term as assistant in the High Sch ol at Hanover. Warren Wagner will be hard pressed to defeat for a two year term.

SATURDAY MARKET

Forty two stall holders were present at the Saturday market. One bushel of old potatoes sold for seventy five cents. Strawberries were brought in for sale, but the price was too high to suit the masses. Eleven bushels of cherries were offered for sale. Vegetables of a large assortment of spring vegetables. Everything appeared on the market—considerably above the prices quoted in this section. Mrs. D. B. Reynolds was seventy three years old Saturday.

SURVEYING NEAR HILLSBURG

Dillsburg New Era says: "The surveying minds in this place have been busy during the week trying to learn the meaning of the arrival of a corps of leading railroad surveyors who are making a careful survey from York and D. and M. Junction. The final line has not been fixed, but it will be a connect with Baltimore and it is very probable that this line will be built by way of Kralltown, the Points and Dover to York.

AROUND THE CAMP FIRE

INCIDENT AT WALKER'S FORD

Troops Were Compelled to Cross Conodoguinet Creek Above Low and Water to Their Waists.

In a recent issue Comrade Sample gives an account of a midwinter expedition into the North Carolina mountains in which he made mention of Walker's Ford, (at brings to my mind the following incident connected with the second lieutenant of Company F. When we appeared in front of the Johnnies they hardly knew what to make of us, for we were not supposed to be in eastern our position. Our left flank was resting on Bald, through which ran a stone fence. The Johnnies succeeded in getting possession of the fence, but would come no further than that when we formed in the timber, the woods sloping up from the road. Artillery was brought into duty to shell us out of the woods, but by changing position we managed to keep out of range. They succeeded in getting on our right flank, and we had to hunt for tall timber.

They pushed us back to the river, where we found the rest of the brigades marshalled in battle array ready. After we had formed on the colors the Johnnies formed just across the road from us, and the boys were anxious to fight. Our commander, Col. George W. Jackson, said we had no orders to fight and that if we did we could rest while the other regiments of the brigade did the fighting. We crossed the river, and went to the support of a battery on the hill, where we lay down in the sun to dry our clothes.

Soon the rest of the brigade were marshalled on the river, and Gen. Johnston, thinking they had everything ready, gave the word: "Come wading down to the ford, but were terribly disappointed when he found we were up by batteries on the river bank and Walker's Ford. Some of the boys had crossed the river, and proceeded to help themselves to chickens and potatoes, but did not have time to cook them, for the order to recross was unconfiscated as an scam to heal our feelings. Such was the fate of Walker's Ford.

Gordon Hits Rock.

A good story is related of Bob Gordon, the pitcher for the Gordon-General Gordon was a conspicuous figure in the battle of Gettysburg, and he would have liked to see the old boy. Gordon is a pitcher of no mean ability, and he lays to the telephone the credit of saving that money we spent on the town and last winter."

STILL SEEK TREASURE

PEOPLE OF SCOTCH HIGHLANDS FIRM IN FAITH.

Tradition of Buried Wealth Lingers and Is Occasionally Made Stronger by Finds—Some Heavy Gold Ornaments Unearthed.

For centuries the search for ancient treasure has been pursued in the glens and wild places of the highlands of Scotland, and numerous unexpected "finds" have been made, writes the Duke of Argyll in Cassell's Magazine. For instance, a tradition that a treasure was hidden in a certain cave had been handed down. According to the story it would never be found except by a stranger. Generation after generation of children searched in vain for a hedger made a hole in the hillside the children believed that he had forgot her the secret, and dug up his harvest, but no sprung of badger ever came forth with bangles on its neck and in its nose. The children knew every rabbit scrape or hen scrape to see if animal or child had been attracted by anything shining under the sun or in the fire.

Then drainage was introduced. For years the glen was never to be cultivated, except on dry slopes where water could not gather, and here people did all the necessary harvesting. But now every field was drained, and to drain off water from flatter ground, and it was necessary to dig a comparatively level places.

One pretty piece of grass land under a cliff was pointed out as a good spot for mowing. From the protection above a great rock had fallen in long ages ago. This had to be removed. The men at the plow left was a stranger, an Englishman.

He put a bag of powder under the rock to blow it up. The explosion followed, the partly splintered rock heaved and fell on its side. Underneath nothing but the bare were useless to the finder. But on the surface of the rock, which had been split in two, were found a number of bracelets of gold, and a number of heavy gold ornaments. In one a number of bracelets found in an island of the Hebrides, and used as drawer handles for an old pine chest in the house of a crofter. In the cottage, found that the old chest had been made to contain a box of artillaus, or £3.75, for it. He took it to Edinburgh, and received for £30 each.

The heavy ornaments as the bracelets must have been a burden to a Celtic beauty. For a marriage that was beaten out until it was thin, for then it would be light and easily worked. Patterns of all kinds could be engraved in it, so as to add great effect in front. We can imagine how proud an old Celtic chieftain or Wales or Ireland looked with a wedding yuhor bend up by a beautiful, a broad plece of gold on his head, shoulder and on his left a long velvet mantle girt in by the belt itself.

Calculating Nature.

"Is that a sudden you are making?" asked the pupil of Mr. Crosscut. "It's a subterfuge. I tear up as much of the sod as I can and you will show me to and how let it rhone all summer. It's just the smart lawn territory to run the lawn mower over."

"I Called up to Ask You Over This Evening"

"What a wonderful comfort and pleasure it is to have all my friends only ten seconds away by telephone," exclaimed one farmer's wife lately. "Why couldn't I get along without my Rural Telephone before? I wouldn't be without it for any price on earth. I have found out that I can call up my neighbors and be kept in touch with the world. Some mornings when I am busy I call up my neighbors and ask them if they want anything from town. Then I call up the stores and order what I want. Then I call up my husband at his office and tell him what I have ordered, so that he will not bring home duplicates. Then I call up my neighbors and tell them what I have ordered, so that they can order what they

CHAPTER XXV.

The Bubble Bursts.

At about the same hour that the judge was hurling threats and insults at Colonel Bradley three men were waiting ten miles away at the head of the barren ridge where it crosses Hicks' cabin. Now no one of these three had ever heard of Judge Bloom Price; the breath of his fame had never blown, however gently, in their direction, yet they were preparing to throw supremely upon him, for he and they were keeping about the quieting in the world where the horses belonging to Wade and Burrell were tied.

At the side of each beast was a pack ansible to the slower and one of the four stole down the path, a mariner of fifty yards, to a point that overlooked the barns. The fourth came last, in mount.

"He's Burrell all right!" he said in an under whisper, "Him and another fellow—the latter is one of the two them." He glanced from one to the other of the surrounding men, seeking to take former hold of themselves on der his eye. Each in turn met it, he protested lightly. "He's as good as ours. Wait till I give you the word. And he led the way into an adjacent thicket.

Memilius Ware and Murrell had halted each at the edge of a path, the outlaw a step or two in advance of his host. They reached the horses and were untying them when the kindred audacity disposed of the three men; each held a cocked pistol; two of these pistols covered Murrell and the third was leveled at Ware.

"Hands up!" cried Murrell himself, for the men confronting him was the first to recognize who should have been speeding across the state.

"You up and hands, Murrell," said Hugo quietly.

One of the other men spoke.

"You are under arrest!"

"Arrest!"

"You are wanted for bigger stealing," said the leader. Murrell did not seem to comprehend. He looked at Hugo in his amazement.

"What are you doing here?" he asked.

"Waiting to arrest you—skin that rabbit," said Hugo, with a wink.

The outlaw's hands dropped at his side, limp and nerveless. With some idea that he might attempt to draw a weapon one of the men took hold of him, but Murrell was nerveless to his touch. He had been for a gleefully wilful and was stretched with the sacking of a bandit.

"Well, by thunder!" cried the man in utter amazement.

Murrell looked into Hugo' face.

"You—you!" said the words shrivelled on his tongue, becoming as inarticulate's murmur.

"It's all over now," said Hugo.

"No!" said Murrell, recovering himself. "You can't do it! Listen to me, Hugo—you can't arrest me!"

"I've done it," answered Hugo. "I've been on your track for six months."

"How about Bloom Price?" asked the man whose pistol still covered Ware. "Have you got anything on him, too, or about his head.

"Where are you going to take me?" asked Murrell quickly. Again Hugo laughed.

"You'll find out out in plenty o' time, and that ain't nothing can pass the word around if they like; now don't you fret about it."

Ware neither moved nor spoke as Hugo and his prisoner turned and went along the path, Hugo with his face on Murrell's account, and six or eight companions aloose at his heels, while the third man led the horses.

Presently the distant sister o hoofs was borne to Ware's sore—only that; the sound died away and the boy he had half expected had not appeared. Instead, for all his will to the contrary, was like other men, like himself. His loudness of voice was but one of their sorcheks. There across the sun the shadow of Hugo was Betty—the thought of her brought him to going awaking sense. The whole fabric of crime by which he had been bound to the past was built of treachery and in the future seemed toppling to upon him, but he stretched out his impotent fist. Hugo, if he knew of Betty's engagement, had not seen fit to meet Murrell with it. Ware noted in comment between his twitching lips the significance of. No one would believe that he, a pioneer, had a hand in that, for a friend of Hugo's could not commit signaling Bess to return. Silence must be told of Murrell's arrest, but he was rich with superlatives; some trip might have been prepared for him, he could not know; and the impulse to him was silence.

His muscle his hands together in a hopeless, modest gesture. And Murrell had gone with—with his own gun, his—his—

"Oh, my God!" he cried. He felt that he had been betrayed. Hugo was his trust and a hot rage poured through him. At last he shielded by the shadow, and, overcome like a drunken man, galloped off.

When he reached the river road he paused and scanned its dusty surface. Here and his party had turned south when they issued from the wood lot. So they had gone, then, and not down to Memphis. Ware laughed harshly. They would be back in time before another dawn broke.

He had halted eight miles, he had turned his bride the previous night after Betty and Hugo had left them to continue the quarks of the wherein were no pursuit. Memilius Ware, who more recent trail left by the four men, he saw at the crossing, and knew that the wide dirt circle his sense of injury overwhelmed him. Hugo had hoped to live to see Murrell hanged.

His woe so enlarged him that in his bitter reflections that he had been unaware of a mounted man who was coming toward him at a swift gallop, but now he heard the rapid thudding of hoofs and, startled by the sound, looked up. Some distance below the horseman drew rein at his side.

"What's up?" he asked.

"How are you, Carrington?" said the planter.

"You—you wanted at Belle Plain," he saw Carrington, and seemed to hear his voice.

"Yes—yes, I am going there at once —no—no—not now," he added, as he stood on his stirrups with a shudder. "I've changed my mind. I'm going back to Memphis."

"Why, I thought Ware, in a hoarse whisper. "Mr. Gus, Carrington, I'm in trouble and I've got to get home—I've got to see—" he fell silent, conscious of his own stupidity.

"I think I understand your feeling, he said Carrington, with a look of gladness.

"Then you'll excuse me," and the planter clapped spurs to his sorrow-der; he saw that Carrington had not started from the spot where they had met.

Ware, too, turned his horse and his neighbors in pow-ession of the place. They greeted him quietly and spoke of the weather as the two companions. The planter listened with an air of wish-ishing to be polite, but Ware, as he now he was plunged into the thick of his misfortune, felt the need of silence of himself, for every word he said would be taken down. He could not set there was symmetry for him, his every act was to be misconstrued, and to their sordid unemotioned judgments.

He sought to forecast the happenings that would follow his arrest. His friends would break jail for him, that was a foregone conclusion, and his insurrection he had planned was so vast that there was no hope for him below. Moreover, though the air might be breathed with relief with him relief, he could not hope to escape the vengeance of the man whose wife he had plotted to destroy; he would have to quit the country and leave behind him his idea of crowns flight. Thank God, Betty was safe out of that, at least best at least Mrs. Price, and he was capable of spoiling that. Ware's thoughts overwhelmed him. He reckon you'll have to excuse me," he said, and, after a stirs out for Texas," said Hicks.

Ware looked at his for so instant. He had thought of flight, too, but not tarnished with the disgrace was such a part of its nature as fear; he could not flee like a thief and be likely cast aside, and it was almost the forward stirrup, and Hicks with a window. If he were going to set, the man would be a help and gather a respite from his fears. The road down the creek was heavy going, the heavy grass; he marked each turn, each ford, and knew that the best best best at last Mrs. Price, and he was capable of spoiling that. Ware's thoughts overwhelmed him. He reckon you'll have to excuse me," he said, and, after a stirs out for Texas," said Hicks.

"Planter stirs now, Hicks," he ob-served.

"Yes, until it turns dark."

"You'll need a horse."

"I was going to help myself to one from Belle Plain and send an errand-boy," said Hicks shrewdly.

"Then you'll have to figure it out for yourself," said he, as he left to the bench like this—or your brother's horse."

"You'll have to figure it out for yourself," said he, as he left to the bench like this—or your brother's horse."

"That's all right," said Hicks, with a chuckle.

"You can stop there as you go by."

"No," said Hicks. "I never did be-fore, and I'm not going to commence on the girl, and I won't go near George's place."

"I don't ask you to go there; you have to pass the house on the road to the head of the bayou. All I want to for you to do is to send a fire on them. They'll know what that means. I'll give you a horse and fifty dollars for the job."

Hicks' eyes sparkled, but he only said,

"Make it twice that and maybe we will do it."

Ware nodded and tortured. Were betrayed; but the sun was sloping into the West, the whatever friend was the hot liquid.

"I'll pay you'll do your part!" he said thickly. He took his purse from his pocket and counted out the amount due Hicks. He handed the cash, and pointed toward the door.

"Don't you want the fire blanted?" asked Hicks. He was familiar with his employer's vacillating moods.

"Yes," answered Ware, his lips quivering; and slowly, with shaking fingers, he added to the pile of bills in Hicks' hand.

"Well, take care of yourself," said Hicks, when the count was complete. He thrust the roll of bills into his pocket and moved to the door.

Ware stood like a statue, paralyzed into his chair, breathing heavily, but his terror swept over him and left him with a savage sense of triumph. This pseudo-hero was nothing, nothing to result illicks and unmake his be-tween. What had he been thinking of unless by only in flight! Before he reached the door he stood erect in his chair, the dropped down on the edge of his bed, his eyes fixed on the window. He was in the room in which he had been wed, married by the sound, startled by the sound, noticed by the sound, where the horses sure drew rein at his side.

"What's up?" he asked.

"How are you, Carrington?" said the planter.

"No, you wanted at Belle Plain," he saw Carrington, and seemed to hear his voice.

Four Delegates-at-Large in Missouri For Roosevelt.

10 DISTRICTS COMPROMISED

National Committee is Date Has Awarded President Taft 158 Delegates and Colonel Roosevelt 14.

Chicago, June 14.—When the Republican national committee adjourned for the night it conceded delegates which had been awarded to President Taft was 146 and to Theodore Roosevelt fourteen.

The committee gave Mr. Taft eleven congress district delegates in Mississippi and six district delegates in Missouri, or a total of seventeen for the day, while the committee awarded one congress district delegate to Colonel Roosevelt in Mississippi, the four delegates at large and four district delegates in Missouri and four congressional district delegates in North Carolina—a total of thirteen.

Governor H. S. Hadley, of Missouri, was the leading orator for Roosevelt by the straightforward, simple manner in which he presented the case on the delegates-at-large from Missouri. He went over the ground by which the delegates were chosen, and followed this up with the affidavit of seven of the nine prominent Republicans who were ready to swear to the truth of the agreement whereby the delegates-at-large were to go to Roosevelt.

The statements on Mr. Hadley's showing were quick to disturbing that there was nothing else to do but to recognize the Roosevelt-Hadley delegates-at-large. They were seated on the motion of Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania.

The Roosevelt people had sent eight delegates-at-large from Missouri, but half a vote each, and Governor Hadley explained that he being the only big showing and said as there were many Democrats and Republicans in the state desirous to obtain the honor he did not want a fight between them and so who should be the four delegates-at-large. They doubled the number so as to include them all.

In order to clear the situation, Senator Penrose moved that Missouri have four delegates-at-large and four alternates, and at the suggestion of Governor Hadley the Hadley delegates-at-large were divided so that the first two on the list-large will be Governor Hadley, J. A. Tolerton, of Jefferson City; Charles S. Dicker, of Kansas City, and Hugh Nicholas, of Joplin. All the other four delegates-at-large were named as alternates under the new arrangement.

There were contests in the First, Third, Fifth, Seventh and Fourteenth congress districts of Missouri, the Taft people having the regular delegates to the Third, Seventh and Fourteenth, and the Roosevelt followers had the regular delegates in the First and Fifth districts.

Senator Penrose suggested a recess, with the idea of reaching a compromise in these contest contests, and finally Governor Hadley, addressing the committee, said:

"We have agreed to the placing on the temporary roll of the convention of the names of the Taft delegates in the Third, Seventh and Fourteenth districts and of the Roosevelt delegates in the First and Fifth. This is done with the express understanding that it will not take up the time of the committee now, in that these contests will go before the convention committee on credentials without prejudice."

In the Ninth North Carolina district the committee seated the McKinley-Green delegation, but the contest did not involve presidential candidates, as both delegations were instructed for Roosevelt. After taking up this contest the committee considered the Third district contest and seated the two Roosevelt delegates—Marion Butler and W. R. Robinson.

The committee will settle another factional fight in North Carolina today and will then take up the Third Oklahoma district.

The contests remaining involve two delegations from North Carolina, eight from Tennessee, thirty from Texas, twenty from Alaska, fourteen from Washington, two from Alaska, two from Hawaii, two from South Dakota, nine from Arizona and two from the District of Columbia.

ROOSEVELT AVOIDS BEMIAL

Won't Say Anything About Proposed Trip to Chicago.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 14.—Political weekly weekend statements emanating from various sources that he would not start for Chicago in a day or two were neither affirmed nor denied by Colonel Roosevelt. He said that there was nothing which he could say on the subject.

Nor would the colonel comment on the latest developments in the situation in Chicago.

It is Colonel Roosevelt's custom to spend three or four hours a day in outdoor exercise when he is at sharp intervals, and when the Republican national committee began its session in Chicago he had little time for exercise previously. By means of the telegraph the colonel is keeping in touch with the situation in Chicago and has given many of his friends

OPENS T. R.'S FIGHT FOR ELECTORS

Filan Starts Movement to Contest Nomination of Taft.

HE GETS SOME SUPPORT

Leaders From Several States Lend Hand to Colonel Roosevelt Discuss His Plans.

Chicago, June 14.—High grade politicians here today were busy and unprecedented moves are due.

The Roosevelt national committee is led by William Filan, of Pittsburgh, Roosevelt's manager for the movement to please the Republican candidate for presidential electors in Washington, Pennsylvania, Maryland and other states with a preference toward Roosevelt, to vote against Taft if the president should be nominated.

Governor Glasscock, of West Virginia, stated that the Republican candidates in his state have decided to support Taft, but that they believe that the Pennsylvania electors ought to vote for Roosevelt if Roosevelt is made nor Maryland.

R. C. Berkowitz, chairman of the Illinois delegation to the convention, here today, and a delegate at large, on Monday meeting for the purpose of getting the delegates to sign a petition to vote for Roosevelt to the electors regardless of how they stand on the ballot. Calls for similar meetings have been sent to the delegations from Oklahoma, Kansas, California, Oregon and Indiana.

Mr. Filan made the further statement that Theodore Roosevelt be nominated as an independent candidate, no that the Taft vote and the Roosevelt vote in the same state, democratic in the movement shall be cast for the Republican electors.

The suggestion, which were made to the press after the Roosevelt leaders meeting, are regarded by the leaders here as the first steps which have already been as mere threats.

The Taft leaders of the Republican national committee will reply to these by the announcement of the positive that no person shall be a candidate for the Republican ticket at the polls on the ticket named by the convention.

Mr. Berkowitz declared that Filan's plan will be chosen by the Pennsylvania delegation, and that Governor Penrose, to support Taft if the Roosevelt plan is consummated, and that he said on the committee.

The Taft leaders declared in the Taft people to have the convention passed a rule that will bar out the Roosevelt's nomination calling upon all the Republican electors in every state to support the ticket.

Mr. Filan, leader of the national committee in the Roosevelt cause said that the plan was not to bolt Roosevelt, they admit freely that they will be content with saving a majority on the Roosevelt instead of Taft on the temporary roll There is no question, they say, that Roosevelt will not be able to win Taft. For the purpose a vote for Taft is a vote for Roosevelt, and no one and planned.

The plan received wagglishly in view of the work ran out for them that the Roosevelt leaders had on a 5 to 1 term From put the proposal to the Roosevelt men. Mr. Filan made a speech to the seventy Roosevelt delegates and said:

"What we say will be to get after the same-to-be delegates and the fellow who has been elected. We will have the better sort are coming from the south to help us. Every delegate who is of national officeholders Prove to the Roosevelt men, and they will be and that Roosevelt can be started all over the country. Roosevelt has the power Show them their loved leader and they will come upon Rook. Once you will get come."

ACCUSES TAFT OF MISUSING FUNDS

Congressman Refers to His Western Trip.

Washington, June 14—Charging that President Taft had misused the $25,000 fund appropriated for his trip to the west by congress, Chairman Fitzgerald, of the house appropriations committee, bitterly attacked the president during consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Fitzgerald declared that the great deal on his recent western trip he solicited the co-operation of federal and secret service men, in spite of a ruling to the contrary by Attorney General Wickersham.

Mr. Fitzgerald declared, however, that he will not make a point of order, but eventually was adopted, 78 to 55. He also declared that he had been informed that "it would pay the Democratic party to keep hands off the president" as he aided the year around."

Representative Cannon, Republican, Gillette, of Massachusetts, in Representative Fitzgerald, of New York, Democrat, seized in favor of the item They held that if the money expended by the president see the country and that it was a proper expenditure.

Representative Page, of North Carolina, a member of the appropriations committee, said that he had been informed that "it would pay the Democratic party to keep hands off the president" as he aided the year around."
